1. Telli Industries has announced its expansion plans to the West Coast region. The company, based in North Las Vegas, will build on its current relationships and plans to form new partnerships with resort and hotel companies across the West Coast.
2. Stimulation Skin Care, of Newport, California, has partnered with Calistoga, California's SpaCare Group, a division of SpaEquip, Inc. to make the Stimulation Skin Care line available to spas across the United States.
3. Located in Middleburg, Virginia, Salamander Resort & Spa estimates that approximately one million bees are now residing at the property as part of the resort's initiative to produce its own honey. The resort has always focused on obtaining locally sourced food and preserving the grounds, so this partnership with a local beekeeper was a natural step forward. Salamander Resort & Spa also hopes that its initiative will help raise awareness of the problems facing honeybees and other pollinators.
4. Hilton Head Health is offering three new and all-inclusive wellness programs under its newly launched H3 Lifestyle. With H3 Lifestyle: Healthy Kitchen, guests will learn to create healthy and delicious meals through hands-on cooking classes and receive education, including a private nutrition consultation. Guests participating in H3 Lifestyle: Body + Mind will be able to connect with their relaxed selves through medication and yoga, and take a Life Balance Assessment. H3 Lifestyle: Fitness is for guests wishing to maintain an active lifestyle and includes a week-long exercise program and a personal training session.
